

AMAZON LAUNCHING SAME DAY DELIVERY OF PRESCRIPTION MEDICATIONS IN NYC AND LA

Amazon's effort to get customers in the two largest U.S. markets whatever they want on the day of their order has expanded to include prescription drugs.

The E-commerce giant said that it's rolling out same-day delivery of prescription medications in New York City and the greater Los Angeles area.

To speed up deliveries, Amazon said it's using new, smaller facilities, stocked with the most common prescription medications for acute conditions. The locations are equipped to process a prescription "within a matter of minutes rather than hours or days," the company said.

"By bringing Amazon Pharmacy's deliveries into our existing world-class logistics network, Amazon is building the fastest and most convenient service for the home delivery of prescription medications," Doug Herrington, CEO of Worldwide Amazon Stores, said in a statement. "These faster delivery speeds will be a game changer when you or your family need your medications quickly."

San Bernardino, Riverside and Anaheim, which are all in the LA area, are eligible for same-day prescription deliveries starting Tuesday. The broader LA metro area will be up and running in April.

Amazon said it would start sending prescription medications via drone in College Station, Texas, one of the two cities where Amazon is dispatching unmanned aircrafts to deliver items weighing five pounds or less.

The company said it's dispatching e-bikes to handle some Amazon Pharmacy deliveries in New York. Amazon has been experimenting with e-cargo delivery bikes, which can speed up deliveries and cut down on emissions, in the city for the past several years.
